Częstochowa is one of the most recognizable Polish cities in the world. According to the Young & Rubicam Agency it is the fourth city in Poland in terms of brand strength, and, at the same time, the most trustworthy place.

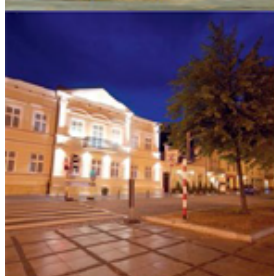

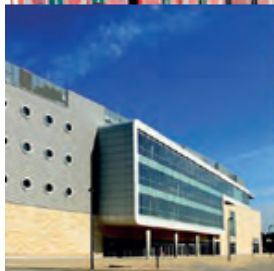

Universities, competitive business costs, a good geographical location, and two economic zones in three locations are only some of the advantages of the city as an investment location.

Częstochowa was always famous for its textile, fabric, and metallurgical industries while the current leading industries include the automotive, fuel and energy, and glass sectors, but the business services sector is also another rapidly developing sector.

Aside from tax relief arising out of permits for operating in special economic zones, the city also offers attractive property tax exemptions for businesses that create new jobs. Work is also highly advanced in regard to the creation of another resolution that will exempt developers that build B+ or higher standard offices from the aforementioned tax.

Częstochowa has qualified professionals, and the average labour costs here are lower than in the Silesian urban agglomeration. Four local universities offer foreign language majors and are open to cooperation with the city in regard to the educating students in accordance with the needs of a specific investor.

The city offers administrative and organisational support in the implementation of each investment, as well as transparent land purchase procedures dedicated to specific investments. The "Programme to support entrepreneurship and create new jobs in Częstochowa in 2013-2018" that was created by the city's government, entrepreneurs from Częstochowa, and the business community is currently being implemented in the city. Częstochowa, a city that until now was seen as a city with tourist generating potential, is currently developing as an economic and academic centre that treats manufacturing and service oriented businesses with equal priority.
